

Malaga 8th International Academic Conference in “Translational Research in Otorhinolaryngology”

August 23th - 24th, 2012, Málaga, Spain.

History of I.A.C.s

These Academic Conferences started in 1984 as an effort to introduce the new frontiers of basic research in the clinic field and to provide a forum of mutual understanding and cooperation between west and east colleagues. At that time, the emerging Otoimmunology pioneered by Prof. J. Veldman in Utrecht (the Netherlands) was the main topic.

Nowadays other important issues emerged and they provided a wider spectrum, as it was shown during the last Conference celebrated in Melbourne (Australia) 2006 under the presidency of Prof. Stephen O'Leary.

Now we invite you to the next Conference to be held in Málaga (Spain) in 2012. It will be dedicated to "Translational Research in Otorhinolaryngology", as a multidisciplinary field. Málaga and its region (Andalucia) has a deeply rooted hospitality, since different cultures and religions from east and west lived in harmony for many centuries. A beautiful place in the south of Europe where this type of research is very active and where its atmosphere is a warranty of intercultural understanding.

Welcome to Malaga IAC 2012
