The Videoconferencing activities will be organized in collaboration with LION (Live International Otolaryngology Network)

The LION Foundation that was created in 2006 is dedicated to promote medical and surgical high quality Continuing Education programs. The LION network is being used for live surgery, panel discussion and formal conferences with PowerPoint type presentations. Since 2006 Lion Foundation served for live transmission of several live surgical performances to all over the world. Politzer Society Board of Directors has decided to collaborate with LION for transmission of Videoconferencing Activities. Politzer Society and the LION Foundation anticipate that this collaboration will result in an update to existing developments that will help define the scope, timing and costs of ongoing development in an educational program in Otolaryngology. The parties will continue to evaluate, and pursue as appropriate, other potential sources of improvement.

In this regard 2 events will be broadcasted in 2010 and one in 2012.

The 1st Politzer Global Microsurgical Broadcast will be focused on stapes surgery and it is scheduled to 11 May 2010 in Istanbul. This event is integrated with the 21st Academic Week – Otolaryngology – Neurotology Days.

The Second Global Broadcast will be established on 5 October 2010 by leadership of Tübingen and in collaboration with Utrecht, Beziers and Hannover. The topic will be based on middle ear surgery.

In 2012 The third Global Broadcast will focus on Cochlear implantation under the leadership of Professor Joachim Mueller in Würzburg.

Politzer Society is looking forward to keep this collaboration with LION for the future.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

We are pleased by launching the new issue of the Politzer Newsletter. In this issue the presentation and details of Politzer Society—LION Foundation takes place. Politzer Society is looking forward for a close cooperation between the LION Foundation. As the communication systems gets more practical and widespread the e-learning systems will increase its dominance in our life.

The feed backs to our communication with National Otolaryngological Societies is encouraging. Even the process has not been finalized yet, the preliminary consequences of this collaboration will reveal itself by creating multinational and multicentre working groups on previously chosen topics by the board of the Politzer Society. The first communication with the commercial companies to give support to the projects encourages us continuing on with this plan.

The organizations for Politzer Scientific activities is continuing on. We are looking forward for the three main scientific events; two videoconferences that will be broadcasted mainly from Istanbul and Tübingen and will be supported by other cities in Europe during 2010 and the traditional biannual Politzer Society Meeting that will take place in Athens in 2011. From LION Foundation:What is the LION (LIVE INTERNATIONAL OTOLARYNGOLOGY NETWORK)

The Live International Otolaryngology Network was created in 2004 and has had an exciting four years undergoing exponential growth. The LION Foundation consists of a group of mostly academic ENT surgeons organising interactive live surgery, panel discussion and conferences to train and share clinical expertise and experience. The last two main events in May 2008 and 2009 had more than 40 international sites connected with more 4-5 000 professionals participating interactively and watching the surgery. From India to Brazil and from Sweden to South Africa colleagues joined the LION meeting in local conference facilities to interact with the surgeons and conference moderators.

The telemedicine concept allows more people to join the meeting and limits travel for most who wish to participate. Colleagues can join the event from the office or from home provided there is an internet connection with sufficient bandwidth.

LION's mission is to teach, learn and use teleconferencing set-ups to reach out to many colleagues worldwide. LION wants to achieve the next best alternative to visiting a surgeon in his operating theatre, to facilitate a much larger group to benefit from this « virtual visit ».

The future of LION

The live surgery main event will continue once a year in May in forthcoming years.

The Foundation will also work towards a surgery on demand set-up selecting what ENTs want to see and what they want to learn. LION will work towards different types of surgery at the same time, for example otosclerosis, ossiculoplasty, skull base surgery, and other procedures to choose from. It is the aim of the December Broadcast which will be focused this year on myringoplasty with a combination of live surgery, case presentation and panel discussion.

The EAONO and the Politzer Society have joined forces with LION to put together a compelling program of insights and education in otology and neurotology by videoconference.

LION needs to also appeal to residents in the middle of their training program. The HD LION network is ideally suited to medical and surgical education programs in which distance learning technology requires the relay of high-quality images. The LION Foundation is developing an educational program delivered by videoconference for residents and interns in Otolaryngology utilizing its HD technology. Since September 2009 LION has been running a pilot weekly videoconferencing residency and internship training session between the University Medical Center in Utrecht (Netherlands) and the Causse Ear Clinic in Béziers (France). Routine surgical lists held every Tuesday morning have been transmitted between these two sites. Dutch Residents and Interns have been able to follow varied middle ear procedures being performed in France from their own ENT department in Utrecht and have been able to interact live with the surgeon. As a result of the success of this pilot The Medical University of Hannover (MHH) and Marseille University Hospital will soon join these weekly sessions. Next year, a pilot live link has been organized with the West Midlands Regional Higher Surgical Training Scheme in the UK. These live links will also be transmitted over the internet in the future thus allowing a cost effective and easy educational program in Otolaryngology which will also include lectures and case presentations.

The LION will also become on a smaller scale a permanent network. It will help teleconsultation where a clinician can present a difficult patient to one or a group of specialists in the field. It will be possible to ask one or more experts from different countries for advice in special situations.

The LION Foundation needs to emphasise the inclusion of as many countries as possible as its mission statement is to reach out to as many colleagues around the world as we can. LION is now working on different formulae to facilitate more people from different places. This will always remain a core aim of the Foundation.
